CHARGES MADE AGAINST GRAIN GROWERS CO.

Superintendent Says They Put False Bottoms in Elevator Tanks Before Official Weighing - Also Accuse Company of False Entry.

At a special session of the royal commission for grain enquiry, held in Port William last Saturday, serious charges were made against the Grain Growers Grain Company.

First witness was R. J. Henderson, grain dealer. He was called as having been superintendent of the Grain Growers' elevator in 1912 and 1913. He filed a statutory declaration of Milwaukee James H. Kridger, declaring that on the instruction of the foreman of the elevator and in the absence of R. J. Henderson he had put false bottoms in the elevator tanks before the official weigh up by the government in 1913. Henderson declares he accused the Grain Growers Grain Company of this practice. He also claimed that he had accused the company that it had, by a cross entry, transferred $50,000 from the profits of the terminal elevator account to the report branch of the company.

He had been asked to do this during his term with the company and had refused to do it, considering it against the rules of the grain exchange and also criminal. His attention had later been called to this entry by the auditors. He further claimed he had accused J. R. Murray, of the Grain Growers Grain company of having shipped two million bushels of wheat in 1912 and 1913 without warehouse receipts, and it was the following summer and after considerable difficulty that the warehouse receipts had been obtained. This wheat belonged to people who had it insured. He further claimed that he had alleged that the United Grain Growers had not credited the Canadian Pacific Railway with 40,000 bushels of wheat which was in the house of the firm. They took the house over from the Canadian Pacific railway. Henderson was working for percentage, as well as salary and was interested in every bushel going through the house.

This rate will apply on the main line as far west as Calgary and as far east as Swift Current; it applies also to all the Railway line to the Crow line as far as Medicine Hat.

Details of sale for return tickets at that rate are from Medicine Hat, W. to Tuesday, June 25, and on Wednesday, June 29, for trains arriving at 2 p.m.

Scout News

The Scouts attended at the scout hall at 7 o'clock, as the scouts and also the Boy Scout Bugle Band were in attendance the Chautauqua parade this evening.

The bugle band played several selections on Friday last at the school during the programme of the evening.

The Rev. T. B. Patton, who has lately been appointed culmbar of the club here, took them for a hike last Sunday morning.

Says Grain Company Is Not Co-Operative

In giving evidence before the grain commission at Medicine Hat, W. H. Abbott, who farms over a thousand acres in that district, said that the Saskatchewan Co-operative Company should scratch the word "co-operative" out of its name, as it was no longer such, by instead was "just so big a shark" as any other grain company.

The wool clip of Alberta this year is estimated at 2,500,000 pounds, which is practically the same quantity as clipped last year.

Geneva, June 8.—The assembly of the league of nations association today adopted a resolution in favor of admission of Germany to the league of nations.

WILL THEY DO IT?

What promises to be one of the most exciting and hardest played games in this season's football series is scheduled to take place this evening, when the Redcliff boys entertain the Indians of Medicine Hat. Upon the result of this game depends much to the Redcliff team, inasmuch as should they win they will become holders for the next year of the brand new trophy presented by the News to the league winners. The Indians are coming determined to win as they are still in the running. It is expected that the Vets-Redcliff game, heavy though it was, will be but a shadow of this one tonight. Now, everybody get out and root for the boys in black and white to bring home the bacon.

Redcliff Footballers at Top of League

Football fans here have been watching in vain the Medicine Hat News for the announcement of the match played in that city last Thursday, in which Redcliff won out handily in a league game with the Callins. The score was 2 to 0 in favor of Redcliff.

There was a good crowd in attendance, among whom were a good representation from Redcliff. The game on the whole was not of the brand which we have become accustomed to in this league. On the contrary it was very tame and unexciting, excepting for the first half. In this, although playing with the wind, Redcliff were unable to locate the net, despite several attempts and close calls. As a result no goals were scored in this half.

The second half, however, showed a great improvement. In this Redcliff started out with more vim and determination, and as their opponents were showing signs of weakness, they were able to score two goals. The result was not long in doubt as Redcliff soon had another two goals scored by their effort. When time was called the score stood 2 to 0 in favor of Redcliff.

The result of this game places Redcliff at the top of the league.

New Athletic Club To Open Monday

Preparations are now completed for opening what promises to be a successful season for the Athletic Association, recently formed under the auspices of the Presbyterian church.

The opening programme will be held next Monday evening on the grounds just south of the church. Equipment for croquet and tennis has already been secured and will be ready for use in that location. Other outdoor games of various kinds will also be indulged in, and on the whole an enjoyable evening is assured.

Officers of the club have also arranged for refreshments, which will be served during the evening.

All young people connected in any way with the church are invited to be present. Those who have not yet joined the club are also desirous of doing so should leave their names with Miss Gray, the secretary-treasurer.

Today North Dakota is bankrupt or finds her finances in such a state that years will be required of sound administration to undo the mischief.

Political pull was rampant among the group for control of the various agencies. Their party friends, paid for by the money. The Fargo, N.D. Forum of Feb. 12, 1921, says: "The State finances are in a hopeless muddle. The State school land and has been tied up, and the department is unable to function. Half losses in the state insurance department cannot be paid. Finance of counties, cities, townships and school districts have reached a state of chaos. The North Dakota State Bank is unable to pay its own drafts."

This is the testimony of one of the most influential publications in North Dakota. Taxes have been enormously increased by the Experimental Group Government.

What Canada needs now so much as anything is capital, to get her industries in operation and develop other resources, thus solving the unemployment question. Experimental clauses do not attempt capital. It only follows stable government and settled conditions.

NELSON SPENCER who will address the electors at a public meeting to be held in the Amuse-U Theatre, on Monday next, at 8.30 p.m.

THINGS TO CONSIDER IN THIS BY-ELECTION BEFORE YOUR VOTE

(Supplied from Col. Spencer's Committee Room). Do not be misled by the announcement on the posters used by Nelson Spencer's opponent, to the effect that the Progressive Party and its candidate are endorsed by labor in this election. This is not the case. Because if you are a laboring man, whether connected with any branch of organized labor or not, you know that the present government, of which Mr. Spencer is a supporter, is the first and only government in Canada that went to the ranks of labor to choose its Minister of Labor, and in order to give permanence and stability to that representative they also made him a Senator. And further because at the convention of the party of which Mr. Spencer's opponent is a supporter, the leaders of that party refused to endorse him, and he was not elected to the position of representative of labor, and refused to affiliate with them.

You also know that when the platform upon which the Progressive candidate is appealing to the electors, was built, neither representatives of labor nor representatives of any other branch of social, economic, or industrial activities throughout the Dominion were consulted. How can a platform drawn up under these conditions be in the best interests of Canada as a whole, representing it does such a multiplicity of interests? Nor can it be in the best interests of the Canadian farmers as a whole, scattered as they are from coast to coast, each section having its own separate and distinct problems.

Is this a time to experiment with new fads and fancies? When the trade, commerce and finances of the world are in such a state as they are at present there is greater need than ever for holding to the paths and principles which have brought us successfully through other serious times with which the country has been faced. It was by concerted action and oneness of purpose that we were able to remove all obstacles and difficulties during the early stages of our history, and we succeeded in succeeding years. It is by the same principles that we will solve our problems today, rather than by trying to turn class against class and individual against individual.

Class movements have been tried before in other places with disastrous results. In 1915 the Non-partisan League captured official control of the State of North Dakota. At that time it was one of the wealthiest and most prosperous States in the republic. Then began the practical application of the economic political group action. It was identical with that now urged in Western Canada by Mr. Spencer's opponent, who favors class legislation or government by occupational groups.

Today North Dakota is bankrupt or finds her finances in such a state that years will be required of sound administration to undo the mischief.

Two More Days of Chautauqua

Considering conditions the Chautauqua is being fairly well patronized in a week, and the crowd is going away from each entertainment well satisfied. The bill for tonight will be a play entitled "It Pays to Alvertise," put on by the Keighley New York Players. This is a most amusing play which will take up the whole evening.

Tomorrow, afternoon and evening, Vinocelli, the Florentine Musician, and Ruby Page Ferguson, will supply the musical programme. In the evening Arthur Walwyn Evans will lecture on "What Democracy Means to Me."

Saturday afternoon the Great Western Alpine Yodlers will be the musical attraction, and J. Sherman Wallace will be the speaker. His subject will be "More Precious Than Gold."

The week's engagement will close on Saturday night with an concert by the Great Swiss Alpine Yodlers.

Council Sits as Court of Revision

The Town Council sat as a court of revision last Monday morning. Although a number of written complaints against the assessment were registered, only a few appeared in person. After they were heard the Council went into committee to consider the complaints. In three cases it was found that houses were over assessed, and instructions issued to have them reduced.

In the other cases the assessments were sustained.

PRESBYTERIANS IN FAVOR OF CHURCH UNION

General Assembly in Session at Toronto. In Effect Within Three Years.

Organic union with the Methodist and Congregational churches was approved by the Presbyterian general assembly of Canada Tuesday by a vote of 414 to 107. The result was a direct result of the vote on the union at the Winnipeg assembly in 1915, when the returns were 406 to 19 in favor of union. The first vote on the question of union was taken at Edmonton in 1911, when also in favor of union, but was not so decisive as the later vote.

The issue came before the 47th assembly last week in the form of two resolutions which had been sent on by a special committee, one moved by Dr. Clark, of Montreal, "that the general assembly take such steps as may be deemed best in connection with the union, as expeditiously as possible, and an amendment moved by Dr. J. Fraser, of Montreal, "that the assembly at no time seek the consummation of organic union without a clear and unmistakable mandate from the people of the union."

The result of the vote was not announced officially after the count, but the unofficial figures were 410 to 111. During the debate, the strong pro-union sentiment in the house was repeatedly emphasized, yet Alberta came last of all the synods in support of union, favoring the motion by only 62 per cent of its vote.

Want Steel on C.N.R. Started From Here

According to a statement from Ottawa there are at present 88 miles of steel laid on the Redcliff-Hanna line of the C.N.R., and 76 more miles will be laid this summer.

An effort is being made to induce the government to start laying steel from Redcliff to the Red Deer and connect up with the portion already completed.

Political Campaign Progressing Quietly

The political campaign in the constituency appears to be progressing quietly and without causing much of a ripple in the general course of activities. Meetings are being held at almost every school house throughout the riding, and with a very few exceptions the people in general are anxious to hear the public questions discussed. In most cases they are approaching the issues with open minds and are willing to give each candidate and their supporters a patient hearing. According to latest reports the result of the contest here will be very close.

Germany Makes Indemnity Payment

A news report from New York says the German government made another payment Tuesday of several million dollars towards the allied reparations account. The exact figures were not revealed by officials of the federal treasury. It was stated that the sum was approximately $14,000,000. With today's operations, bringing the total payments to approximately $50,000,000, it was said that an additional $30,000,000 remained to be paid on the debt by Germany, in accordance with the schedule announced in Berlin.

The Lamp In The Window

By Frank Wall

It was just a little cottage, standing in a corner of what had once been old John Humphrey's farm. John Humphrey was dead and the place had been merged long ago in the magnificent grounds of the house built by some unknown millionaire on the crest of the hill.

There were all kinds of rumors about that house, but the only facts were that no one had ever seen the owner or had even heard his name. The house a place in white with broad terraces and smooth sloping lawns, was exquisitely furnished, but only the caretaker and the scrub-woman enjoyed its perfection. Day by day and year by year it stood there glowing in the warm sunshine, and at night the moon played quizzically about its white walls and cast long gleaming shadows across the lawn, and that was the only sign of life there for almost twenty years.

The little cottage stood near the road and was occupied by old John Humphrey's son. He kept himself apart from his neighbors and was not very popular. They said he had no social ability, no human feelings, and perhaps they were right. Ordinarily his face was like a mask, but when sunset came and he placed his little lamp in the window overlooking the road, it softened into an extraordinary tenderness. If the neighbors could have seen him then, they might have changed their opinion of him.

And this had gone on for nearly twenty years. Every night he lighted the little lamp and when he had lighted it he sat by the window watching and watching and watching for someone who never came.

Sometimes there were noisy parties who had motored down from New York, which was only fifty miles away, and they would come and say something to eat. He would get the best he had, and then he would go back to his corner and stare down the unswerving road.

One night a furious storm broke over that part of the country. The rain came down in torrents, and the vivid flashes of lightning made the big house on the hill appear even more impressive and beautiful. After he had lighted his little lamp, he stood watching the storm, and it was while he was so occupied that he saw an automobile coming, rattling up the steep slope of the road. It came to a standstill opposite the cottage and half a dozen people alighted and hurried up the little path.

They were all young except one, a very beautiful woman of about forty years of age. The others addressed her as Madame Lesia, and the cottage, sitting quietly in his corner, recalled her name as that of a great girl who, after years of struggle, had recently taken New York by storm. They were all artists of one kind or another, full of wild spirit and great energy, and they were all of the same convention; and the one they called Madame Lesia was the wildest of them all. Yet there was this difference, that her wildest seemed to be forced. It was as though it struggled all the time with some deeper feeling, as though some secret sorrow of her heart had been touched and she wished to hide it. "Let us ask Madame Lesia," cried one in the midst of a furious argument and the singer turned smilingly. "I don't know," she murmured. "I was married he would sacrifice even his wife's happiness to his art, if need be; that is a supreme." "And you, Helen?"

The girl laughed vivaciously and yet with an undercurrent of sadness. "I don't know," she murmured. "I want to be famous but I want to be happy too. Is it not possible to be both, Madame?"

The singer was staring at a photograph that stood on a side-table. It was a girl of perhaps twenty-three or twenty-four years of age, dressed in some cheap material, obviously village-made, but one scarcely noticed that for the transfiguring happiness that shone in her face.

"Do you see that girl?" she said quietly. "Do you notice how plainly she is dressed? And that cheap little wedding ring at which she is staring so intently? That girl isn't famous and yet she looks happy. And I," she added, as though speaking to herself, "I am what you call famous, but I am not happy."

The corner of the light fell on the window, as though drawn by the sadness in the singer's voice. "That is my wife," he said hoarsely. "We live near here, but the lure of New York crept like a poison into her veins. She thought she could be famous and she left me here."

"Some day perhaps . . ." said the singer softly.

Every night I light my little lamp in the window and watch for her return," said the man passionately. "Always I hope that she will come back to the simple happiness that she has left for the glitter you call fame."

Madame Lesia rose suddenly. "We all hope so," she said earnestly. "See, my friends, the storm is over. Who will prepare the car for the journey back?"

The young men of the party raced out all at once and the girls followed a moment later. Madame Lesia turned to the caretaker. Her eyes were shining. "They told me you had gone abroad," she said.

The man lifted his hands in a gesture of despair. "For many years I have waited here," he said. "And now . . . you have come back, and you are famous. This humble life will appeal to you less than ever."

"I want you," she whispered, "that is all I care about. I would have spoken as soon as I saw you, but was afraid. And as for the fame you speak of . . . it means nothing to me now."

Her companions were calling her. The man went to the window and looked down the little lamp he had tended so faithfully told me that ever.

"It is for you to decide," he said solemnly. "God knows I want you, but there is no bitterness in my heart now. You decide to go back to your great world I will put out this light, and there is an end of all my hopes."

The others were at the door now, and she went and stood by her husband. This is how I answer that question, Helen," she said to the girl. "I left my husband twenty years ago. I have waited all that time and offer now I come back home."

"You must go on to New York without me," cried the man hoarsely. "This cottage is my home."

"No," cried the man in a ringing voice. "I have something else to say. You tired of me because you said I wasted too much time on that invention I was working on. Well, I justified my ambition as you justified yours. I went across the road and pulled aside the curtain, showing the big house on the crest of the hill, glowing in the moonlight. "That is the result of my invention," he cried.

"That is the home to which you have come back."

A Matter Of Sense.

Cardinal Bonhoeffer is quite clear that there can be no complete separation of Ireland and England. He does not believe that the Irish want it. For this is a matter, not of mere sentiment, but of sense. Ireland cannot live without Great Britain, and the standpoint of national defense it may be said that Great Britain cannot live without Ireland. The sooner that dream disappears the better.

A Man's Weight In Gold.

How much is a billion dollars? One billion worth of coin silver would make a cube nearly fifty feet on each edge. If you were worth your weight in silver that would not make you rich. The weight of a 160-pound man would be balanced on the scales with $2,500 worth of coin silver. His weight in coined gold would be worth only $400.

The present year marks the 400th anniversary of the death of Ponce de Leon, the discoverer of Florida.

AHAVEN FOR SUMMER

BY LORETTA C. LYNCH
An Acknowledged Expert in All Matters Pertaining to Household Management.

"We are free-women who have secured a summer abode where our kiddies may have a good time and to which our husbands may commute daily. It is close to the seashore. The house, however, is very old, and by pooling our funds we were able to purchase it at a low price on the second floor. There is an attached garage."

The men will do the necessary repairs, but it is up to the women to provide for furnishings, and for their own use. They have not much money. There are three large rooms on the first floor and two large ones on the second floor. There is an old windmill on the place which, I believe, may be repaired as to provide the house with water. Any suggestions will be appreciated."

When I read this letter I almost envied these fortunate women. The corner of the light fell on the window, and with certain alterations I undoubtedly be most comfortable during the warm days to come.

Plan to use one of the large rooms on the first floor as a dining room. Have the men construct a long table with folding legs. Use folding camp chairs. Cover the table with plain white oilcloth. Should you care to use this room for a dancing party the tables and chairs may be folded up and placed away.

The porch adjoining the front room, which you described in your letter, should be repaired and enlarged and then screened in. It could be used for a family sitting room.

Plan to use one of the rooms on the first floor as a room for reading or study, or, on occasion, a guest bedroom.

The other room will, of course, be the kitchen and laundry combined. Adjoining the kitchen, or, entirely separate from it, have the men construct a bathroom. If the windmill is working well, arrange to have it supply water to this bathroom.

A shower might be arranged. Several partitions might be made so that several men could bathe at the same time.

The larger room on the upper floor might be partitioned with curtains, or it may be used into berths, one above the other, ship fashion. The larger room might accommodate the women and children and the men might have the same room.

Good mattresses and springs are expensive. Personally, if you are within commuting distance, I should prefer to have the beds and bedding brought from home by motor.

You say you have not much money to spend on furniture. If your family has on hand some article of furniture which seems too good to throw away and yet of which they are gladly dispose. Why not have each of the four families look over their households? No matter what the first may be, and paper it down, and use mission brown or gray felt on the furniture. Stains made of cretaceous or checked glass are suitable for the floor, however, when in any form for the summer cottage.

For the wall finish, choose some of the composition boards which we find on the modern market. A cool green finished board of this type was seen in a seashore cottage last summer. The furniture was mission brown—made over to this shade—and the kerosene lamp had a shade of soft yellow.

The floor had all its cracks filled with one of the patent fillers on the market and had been stained dark brown and waxed. Here and there was a green grass stain.

It is my suggestion that each add to the entire housekeeping for one entire day, with the children, perhaps assisting her in turn on the dishwashing. In this way, each of the five will have four days' rest out of every five.

Fuel From Sawdust

Californian Has Been Successful In Solving Problem.

A sample of fuel from sawdust has been received in New Westminster by the Board of Trade from Mr. Walter Thomas, of Bureka, California. Methods of making fuel from sawdust waste have been experimented with in the New Westminster district for many years, but so far none have been evolved that proved to be suitable as a commercial proposition. Apparently the problem has been solved by Mr. Thomas, who is now considering establishing a plant in this district, and is engaging as to a site.

Police Force Strengthened

Provision Made for Enforcing Law at Port McMurray.

The importance of Port McMurray as a jumping off place for the great north land, and the fact that the townsite is at the end of the steel of the Alberta & Great Waterways, has resulted in the Alberta Provincial Police strengthening their Port McMurray detachment. It is the anticipation of the police that additional men will be required at the steel's end.

Constable J. Smyth, formerly of the detachment at Clyde, left Edmonton for Port McMurray recently and will take up his post at that point and cooperate with Constable J. B. McDonald who has been stationed at Port McMurray for the past three or four years. Two men will also be stationed at Lac la Biche, these being Constables Messer and McCarthy.

Not the Ireland of History

According to Government Murders Are Committed by Imported G-men.

The dragging of a woman out of her humble home in the dead of night and shooting her dead, heedless of her pitiful appeals for mercy, and riddling her poor body with bullets, is not the Ireland of history. This is not the Ireland of history, in whose pages we find chivalry and tenderness and pity, gallant service rendered to worthy causes by a high-spirited race, who thrill to it with high and poetic, and find a catch in the throat for all things lovely and exalted.

The Government must be right and the modern world, with its check with shame are committed by gangs of ruffians who have been prime accessories for whom the sacredness of human life does not exist and who will kill for wages, without compunction or remorse. It must be so, for it is incredible that any Irish man would commit the inexcusable crime of murdering a helpless woman, whose appeal for mercy could not be silenced by the fierce savages.

Bulgarian Labor Law Now In Operation

All Classes of Society Have Been Called to Fulfill Service Duties. All classes of society in Bulgaria have been called upon to fulfill their service duties under the provision of the compulsory labor law, which was adopted a year ago. The law provided that men who had attained the age of 20 years and girls who were 16 years old, were to be called upon for a certain amount of compulsory labor for the state. Men were to work 12 months and women six months and none was allowed to emigrate until duties imposed had been performed.

The number of persons coming within the scope of the law was 700,000, of whom 600,000 have been at work, the labor done comprising road making, sanitary service, digging of canals, street paving and the building of schools and reading rooms.

Lack of Home Training.

There are four hundred boys under twenty years of age in the penitentiaries of Canada, according to General W. S. Hughes, Superintendent of Penitentiaries. General Hughes is undoubtedly right in putting a large share of the blame on the lack of proper training in the home—Orilla Packet.

The National Concern

All Social Progress Is Dependent On Good Health.

Good health is, at least it should be, made a matter of community and national welfare; for much of what we call social progress is dependent on it. It is a fact worthy of consideration that a sum of not less than $700,000,000 in wages is lost through ill-health each year in the United States alone. On an average we lose something like seven days a year from our working time, and when this is multiplied by the number of workers in this country, the sum total is a surprising one. On a large number—From the Detroit News.

Evidence Of Progress.

To provide for extensions to the government telephone system in the province of Manitoba and to erect new public buildings this year $3,870,000 has been voted by the Provincial Legislature.

The Plant For Winnipeg.

Plans for the erection this fall, or early next spring, of the first unit of a brick tile and glazed tile manufacturing plant in Winnipeg are now complete, according to C. L. Thompson, manager of the Martin Engineering Company, of Niagara Falls, Ontario. The first unit will have a capacity of 200,000,000 face brick a year. Deposits of clay used in the manufacture of red buff face brick are known to exist in close proximity to the city.

Greeks Reject Settlement

Alleges Offered Generous Reward for Services During War.

A settlement by negotiation was offered to the Greeks which rewarded them for their services to the Allied generous lines. It was rejected, because during the war on more than one occasion the Greeks had been deceived. With an overweening confidence in themselves, which nobody shared, the Greeks set out to satisfy all their demands by force. They have succeeded in getting hard knocks. There will be no sympathy for them in their disappointment, and when their quarrel with the Turks again becomes the subject of negotiation they must not be surprised if the conditions of settlement are less favorable to them than those they have spurned—London Daily Express.

MUCH ILL HEALTH DUE TO BAD BLOOD

If the Blood is Kept Rich and Red You Enjoy Good Health.

More disturbances to health is caused by weak, watery blood than most people have any idea. When your blood is impoverished, the nerves suffer from lack of nourishment and one can be troubled with insomnia, neuritis, nervousness or other ailments, and you may have muscular rheumatism or lumbago. If your blood is thin and you begin to show symptoms of any of these disorders try building up the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills have a special action on the blood and as it becomes enriched your health improves.

The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind is proved by the experience of Mrs. D. J. McDonald, North River Bridge, N.S., who says: "For some years I suffered severely with headache, pain in the back and a run-down condition. At times the pain in my back would be so bad that I would sit up in bed all night. From time to time doctors were treating me, but did not give me any permanent relief. And then one day when I was suffering from a terrible headache I came to see me, and urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I took taking two boxes I felt relief. I got my blood back and before long all my ailments were gone. I felt as though they were giving me new life, as in every way they built up and improved my health and strength. I am now working as a baker in a large mill, and I feel like a new man and feel no worse after my own work. I say with you that the condition is due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box, or by mail for $2.50 from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

We think it right to say, here and now, in our opinion, if a League of Nations had not been created at the peace conference at Versailles, if our aspirations and the aspirations of the world had not been aroused by it and the discussion growing out of it, and if the great majority of the nations were not already joined in an association for the preservation of the peace of the world, there would have been no hope of its attainment until another and a greater world war had broken out.

Canadian Demand For German Goods

Manufacturers and Workers Shold Realize Keen Nature of European Competition.

Indications of the rapid growth of imports from Germany and the demand in Canada for products of German manufacture supplied by the firm of A. R. MacMillan Co., Toronto, who are brokers for such goods, and who maintain an office in Hamburg. The German official trade reports indicate that there are many cargoes of goods en route and that Canadian importers and German exporters are taking advantage of the delay in enforcing the customs regulations of the reparations committee to get large shipments moved. Glass goods and aluminum utensils are noted, also thermometers and small goods such as books and eyes and needles and pins.

The following translation of a clipping from a Berlin paper indicates the German impression of the Canadian demand—

"According to a cable the Canadian Bureau of International Trade, Canada is 'hungry' for German manufactures. Metal goods, toys and harmonicas, and glassware are in particular demand. Canadian firms seem to have the intention of making use of purchasing agents in Germany to secure the goods demanded by their trade. Many Canadian firms are trying to secure agency arrangements with important German firms particularly the lines of goods in which German manufacturers have been dominant in the past. A number of new lines actually offered on the German market are being accepted."

Increasing Interest In Western Canada

Public Asking About Land Settlements in Prairie Provinces. An increased demand by the public for information regarding land settlement is reported by the Department of the Interior at Ottawa. This increased interest is attributed partly to the fact that Crown lands in Western Canada within fifteen miles of a railway, which heretofore have been reserved for military purposes, are now available for civilian entry on the 1st of May.

Headline Crown lands that may be available, it is estimated that there are about 200,000 quarter-sections of privately owned lands lying idle in the prairie provinces, most of them within easy reach of railways. The same condition applies, though in a lesser degree, to the older provinces of Canada.

A WRONG IMPRESSION.

It would appear from a number of complaints registered last Monday at the Court of Revision, that those making the complaints had not gone fully into the matter from its several angles. A number appeared to be of the opinion that their assessment was raised this year. This is not the case. The assessment in most cases is the same. The only difference is that this year improved property is assessed at seventy-five per cent. of actual value instead of fifty per cent. If that were all that is to be taken into consideration there might be some ground for complaint. But it isn't. If those who have already received their assessment notices would take the trouble to consider the tax rate set for this year and figure out what their taxes will be they will readily see that the total taxes on their property this year will be a few dollars less than last year in every instance.

When this is taken into consideration, and when it is remembered that the town has certain obligations to meet if we are to continue to carry on, we are satisfied that there is little ground for complaint from any quarter, especially in view of conditions throughout the west at the present time.

FILLING A GREAT NEED.

Although the attendance at the Chautauqua which is in town this week is not so large as on previous years the entertainments put on so far are of an even higher standard than ever and are being thoroughly enjoyed. The several lectures to date have been of a highly educational character, and will no doubt be of especial help to the advanced pupils in our schools.

No matter what may be said to the contrary, and no matter how the system under which Chautauqua is run may be criticised, yet it cannot be denied that Chautauqua is filling a great need in the lives of both young and old in the smaller centres throughout the country. The three lectures given so far both from an educational standpoint and the pleasing mannerisms of the speakers, have well worth the price of a season's ticket alone, to say nothing of the excellent musical programme twice a day.

It is unfortunate that conditions are such this year that the engagement here this week is not the financial success which the movement deserves, and it would be still more unfortunate if present conditions would mean that we will have no more Chautauqua in future.

HOUSING OF POULTRY.

Not all who keep chickens either in town or country know how to secure the best results from their flocks. For lack of knowledge the chicks often develop into spindle-legged, small-bodied, poor-laying creatures. And yet any amount of instructive literature is published and can be had without cost by applying to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa. Housing shares in factoring, if the best results are to be gained. In this connection it is interesting to observe that a revised edition of the bulletin on Poultry House Construction by F. C. Elford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman, has just been issued by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, to meet the constantly increasing demand for information coming from almost every class of the community. The bulletin, which is based on trials of various kinds of poultry houses in different parts of Canada, traces of the subject clearly and comprehensively. Plans and building instructions, with illustrations and diagrams, are so given as to enable anyone to erect such a poultry house as may be desired.

In view of the fact that the demand for mixed farming and the necessity for more attention to all side lines in connection with it, is becoming more and more apparent each year, this is one branch which should not be lost sight of.

The grading done on Broadway last week has made a vast improvement on that thoroughfare.

Don't wait till the clouds roll by;
Hattie, our only Rainmaker,
Don't wait till the clouds roll by.

Consensus enumerators are now going their rounds taking the census for all Canada. In doing so they are required to get a fund of information, and in order to get it they have to ask each head of the family a number of questions. There may be those who think some of the questions asked are unnecessary, but here is a purpose for all of them. The public can greatly assist the enumerators by having their information ready and giving it cheerfully. Any who try to evade the questions or give wrong or misleading answers are liable to a heavy fine.

No Settlement Yet
In the Coal Strike

The next development in the English coal dispute is not unlikely to be direct negotiations between the coal miners and the men. A semi-official statement was issued to the effect that the coal strike is causing a deflation averaging 10,000,000 monthly on the working railways, which, being under government control, has to be compensated by the shareholders at the expense of the taxpayers.

Regrets that the miners have rejected the latest government offer for a settlement was expressed in a letter from Mr. Lloyd George to Frank Hodges, secretary of the Coal Miners union. The premier wrote that he had nothing further to propose.

The Home of the Big Tye

Tye Salmon caught at the mouth of Campbell River, Vancouver Island.

On the rim of the world in Western Canada, just off the mainland of British Columbia, lies Vancouver Island, an outpost of the Empire. This island, which on a map of the world, looks almost negligible in comparison with the vast area of Canada, is as big as several of the Kingdoms of Europe, and is in reality made up of 15,000 square miles of magnificent and diversified country.

One of the island's chief attractions to the traveler, if he is anything of a sportsman, is the fine fishing and hunting to be obtained among the mountain fastnesses, the great timber, and in the waters of the lakes and streams. A day or two's run out from Victoria, the capital of British Columbia, situated on the southern extremity of Vancouver Island, will take one to the heart of the primal splendor, the sanctuary of all sorts of game from the black bear and the elk to the heaver and the squirrel, from the quail to the eagle. But perhaps the sport which has made Vancouver Island famous is more its fishing than its hunting, for the salmon caught in the waters here are the largest and gamiest in the world.

There are two streams on the island which claim the attention of a sportsman's point of view. The first, which has been fished by all sorts of people from princes and peasants, down the social scale, is the Combermere River, one of the famous Indian rivers which tend to inhabit the east part of the island, and about whom there are many legends. It is a fine river, and in Wales, during his week's visit to Vancouver Island, the late King George V. fished for trout on its banks.

Old Windmills of the Quebec Roadside

by courtesy of the C.P.R.

Landmarks of the Quebec Roadside, everywhere hold one with fascinated interest, on account of their connection with the past, and because as a rule they are such as occur nowhere else this side the Atlantic.

Shrines, large and small, elaborate and simple, erected by communities, or by some Society or by private persons. Large "Crosses" marking off the miles and cross-roads; and along these roads, at somewhat infrequent intervals, one happens on old mills driven by water-power or possessed of wind-driven sails, or standing like storm-worn sentinels at sea when gales have licked away their sails. Some of these old mills have in many instances made more "fortune" out of their old mill erected in olden days of the grand seigneurie.

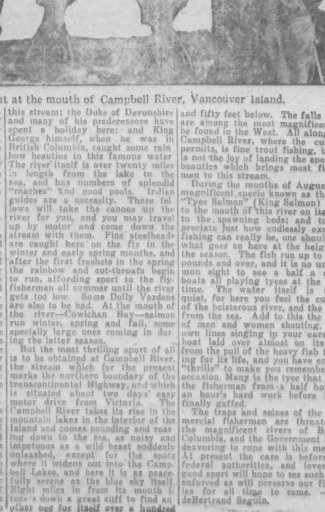

An especially well-preserved old mill of the "towered windmill" type is to be seen on the Vancouver Road. It arises on the level meadowland of the south shore of the St. Lawrence, once as naturally as its forbears arise on the landscape back in old Normandy. There is an air about this old tower built in solid old millstone as to make you think it at one time a tower of defense, and it might easily have been against the plundering savages who no doubt frequently came this way when the tower was built. Sometimes I think we do not realize the value which these old buildings and bits of architecture from another age mean to us as an illuminated page of the country's history. This mill is more surely than a landmark, "V. I. in target only, to voyagers on the and fifty feet below. The falls here, so far as the magnificent to be found in the West.

The Campbell River, where the current permits a fine trout fishing, but it is not the joy of landing the speckled beauties which brings most fishermen to this stream.

During the months of August the magnificent scenery known as the big "Tye Salmon" (or "Tye Salmon") to the mouth of this river on its way to the sea, spawning bed, and to appreciate just how endlessly exciting fishing can really be, one should see what goes on here at the height of the season. The fish run up to sixty pounds and over, and it is no uncommon sight to see a half a dozen boats all playing Tye at the same time. The water itself is never quiet, for here you find the current of the lake's river, and the swirl from the sea, and to this the noise of men and women shouting, your own lines singing in your ears, the boat held over almost on its side from the pull of the heavy fish fighting to life, and you have enough "thrill" to make you remember this fishing trip for the rest of your life.

The traps and seines of the commercial fishermen are threatening the magnificent rivers of British Columbia, and the Government of Canada is endeavoring to cope with this menace, by passing the Salmon and Trout Fisheries Act, which gives the federal authorities, and forces of enforcement as well, power to save fish for all time to come. — N. HON. T. A. CRERAR SAYS GET WILD LANDS LISTED

Leader of National Progressive Party Endorses Principle of Legislation Requested by Western Canadian Colonization Association and Its Multitude of Supporters Throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Hon. T. A. Crerar's statement reads: "The proposal of the Western Canadian Colonization Association that an inventory of unoccupied land be taken under Government auspices in the prairie provinces, and that the owners of such land should be obliged to fix a price at which they would sell to incoming settlers, is, I think, an excellent one. The fact that the price so fixed would be made the value for assessment of the land, and that the land tax would keep the owner of the land down to a price that was reasonably fair. Land speculation, and for that matter speculation in other natural resources, has been one of the worst evils this country has suffered from."

Urges Development Of Peat Resources

Canada Has More Than 37,000 Square Miles of Bog.

An Arnp, past specialist of the geological survey, informed the special parliamentary committee on the peat lands of Canada that there was no reason why Canadian peat should not replace coal for heating purposes throughout the Dominion. "The peat lands of Canada," he stated, "are of such extent that they could supply the country with fuel for cooking and open grates and for furnaces during the fall and spring months. The peat lands of Canada are estimated to be 37,000 square miles of peat bog had been discovered and should be developed. One ton and a half of peat would give as much light as a ton of anthracite coal."

Prince Henry To Go In Army

Fond of Sports and Immensely Popular With Public.

Prince Henry, the third son of the King and Queen, who attained his majority on March 20, is expected to go into the army. Although trained somewhere in the background by his older brothers, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York, Prince Henry is immensely popular with the public.

In stature he excels his brothers and is fond of sports and outdoor life. In pursuance of his inclination to be a soldier he went through the army class at Aldershot and afterward studied at Sandhurst, the English West Point. Last August the Prince was gazetted a second lieutenant of the King's Royal Rifles and at present is attached to the Thirtieth Hussars at Aldershot.

Thieves Were Original

Entered Church Near Lille, France, and Stole Bells.

At a time when such a large percentage of French criminals are specializing in thefts of jewelry, pocket-books and other small portable luxuries of life, it is almost refreshing to hear of such originality as was shown by the ruffians who devoted their attention to stealing a church bell weighing one and a half tons. Recently a considerable force of motor bandits entered the ruins of Essars Church, near Lille, France, and succeeded in hauling out a huge bell and placing it upon their lorry. They were "surprised" in the act by the night watchman, who made an attempt to resist the removal of the bell but was blooded by the bandits, who got clean away.

The Water Spider.

A correspondent describes a peculiar spider that lives under water, the greater part of its life. It builds a dome-like nest of silk among weeds in ponds and ditches and the spider lives with it. In that strange house it lives and lays its eggs. In autumn it makes another nest at a greater distance below the surface of the water, and, having sealed itself inside, it sleeps until spring. Taken out of the water, the spider dies, but as soon as it is put back the bubble of air that collects around its body makes it look like a ball of quinine. It is the only spider that has taken to a wholly aquatic life, says the writer—Country Life.

Belated Liquor Valued At $40,000. Sydney, N.S.—Scales of liquor valued at $11,000 marked the fifth day of the bone dry Sydney campaign here. The value of liquor stored in the Sydney district since May 29th now totals $40,000.

Canada To See "All Star" Football

Tour of Scottish Team Is Creating Wild Excitement.

When the officers and members of the Scottish All-Star football team arrive in Halifax on May 18th, the desire of all Canadian football men to have an "Old Country" professional, first-class team of players come to this country, will be replied.

The Dominion Football Association, through its President Dan MacNeill and Secretary-Treasurer D. W. Roy, have completed final arrangements for the tour of the Scottish All-Star football team, which they represent.

The party of sixteen players, who have been chosen for this long developed missionary football enterprise to represent the Scottish All-Star football team, will be accompanied by a band of music and a band of music.

Officials Issue Warning However Against Mouthful Companies.

"Present indications are," says a statement issued by the department of mines, "that the reported discovery of oil below the Fort Norman on the Mackenzie River may prove to be one of the outstanding events of the mining industry of Canada."

Officials of the department emphasize, however, that "the indiscriminate purchase of stock in many of the petroleum companies that are being organized for the purpose of acquiring petroleum claims in the Mackenzie River basin cannot be recommended."

It is the best conditions is extremely hazardous and only trained geologists can properly carry out such work. The hazardous staking of claims for speculative purposes is to be discouraged, and it will likely be found that the great majority of the claims, acquired merely in the hope that they could be turned over to companies prepared to sink wells, will be lost to the hands of the speculators with resultant heavy loss to the unfortunate stockholders.

Sir James Loughheed, minister of mines, announced publication of a revised edition of the departmental report on the Mackenzie River basin.

Officials are being received by the department from all parts of the world.

Little Talk On Life.

"Life," said a tailor, "is a piece of stuff given to each man to make a coat-rack vest to some narrow proportions to others. Each man has his coat according to his cloth, and as he makes it to suit he wears it, long or short, patterned or plain, well-fitting or ill—Westminster Gazette."

Another Monster Egg.

A Flamingo Egg, laid and found by Louis Laporte, of Somerset, has entered the field of competition for the honor of laying the largest egg. The Flamingo Free Press received a specimen of this egg's contents and it is one of this town's ambitions efforts—an egg measuring 9 1/2 inches around its longest circumference and 7 1/2 inches around its widest.

James McGonney—The dandy little inside mender, who contributed most to the success of Patrick Thistle in the recent Scottish Cup series. Formerly played for Celtic, and was frequently capped for Scotland. Known as the "Napoleon of Football."

Paddy Crossan—No Scottish team would be complete without one representative from Edinburgh. A back of the first water, rugged as he looks, but a veritable stonewall in the clutch. Possesses a powerful kick.

Alex McAlister—Veteran right back of the Glasgow Celtic, hero of many international matches and considered by the "fans" the "mainstay" of the defense men playing the game in the Old Country. Of the old war-horse variety; "Never out of the game."

Jimmy Brownlie—Famous goal-kicker, who can be classed as a "goal machine." Has been faithful custodian of the goal for many years, and has seen much service in international matches. One of the best examples of the "Daddy of them all."

Suitable Jap Alliance Is Quite Feasible

London Papers Say It Is Fit Subject For Conference.

Declaring that the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese treaty is a proper subject for the consideration of the conference of anti-American states, which will be held in London in June, two leading London Sunday papers, the Observer and the Sunday Times, publish interesting editorial arguments in the need of effecting a new alliance with Japan which will be satisfactory to both the United States and the dominions.

The Observer, alluding to certain American statements on the subject, says the "young men" are registered in the interests of Japan, but, in the Anglo-Japanese treaty would break up the British Empire. None of the dominions would ever consent to support the Mother Country in any action against the United States.

The Sunday Times, which has no opinion of the anti-American spirit, says the "young men" are registered in the interests of Japan, but, in the Anglo-Japanese treaty would break up the British Empire. None of the dominions would ever consent to support the Mother Country in any action against the United States.

Last Offense Like Her First.

London's oldest shoplifter, who has spent half of her 82 years in existence in prison, has been given the mildest punishment that could be inflicted, by direction of the home office. As a young girl she was sent to prison for a long term for her first offense, and as a consequence her whole life was ruined. She has been convicted between 20 and 40 times. She has been sent to prison for twelve months, where she is to be kept in the hospital. Her first offense, like her last, was stealing a piece of silk.

Radium Is Lost In Mysterious Manner

Authorities at Hospital Decline to Give Any Information.

Radium valued at several hundreds of pounds, belonging to the Sheffield Royal Infirmary, has disappeared mysteriously.

The authorities at the hospital—a voluntary institution, supported by public subscriptions—decline to give any information beyond the fact that the loss is "due to the unfortunate error of certain people."

The radium is stored and prepared for medical purposes at the University of Sheffield, and then transferred to the hospital.

A search among the city's ashes with a special apparatus is stated to be contemplated.

In 1914 a quantity of radium worth about £100, which had fallen on the floor of a ward in the Royal Infirmary at Liverpool, was recovered from dust cart.

A search among the city's ashes with a special apparatus is stated to be contemplated.

Constructed Propellers From Crude Material

Engineer in Frozen North Used Dog Skin, Boards and Old Rifle Hike.

With a few dog sleigh blades, glue made from raw moose hide and some crude blacksmith tools, W. A. Johnson, a Hudson's Bay Company steamboat engineer at Fort Simpson in the sub-arctic, constructed propellers with which one of the two all-metal liners of the Hudson's Bay Company recently returned from Simpson to Peace River. The story is told this week in the Beaver Magazine of the Hudson's Bay Company.

The flying frigates broke their propellers at Simpson last month on their way to the North. The propellers were damaged and the emergency repairs made by Mr. Johnson both of the machines were made from dog skin and old rifle hick.

The Beaver's correspondent, an eye-witness, states that both machines, crashed at Fort Simpson, smashing their big propellers. Wood and metal were broken and the propellers were damaged and the emergency repairs made by Mr. Johnson both of the machines were made from dog skin and old rifle hick.

The Idle Young

Large Number Are Unemployed in United Kingdom.

An attempt is to be made to mitigate the grave danger attending the presence of the large numbers of unemployed youths who through London's streets. At present 107,000 of these "young men" are registered as unemployed in the United Kingdom.

The Minister of Labor has issued regulations by which attendance at approved courses of instruction may be made a condition for the receipt of unemployment benefit.

Native to Alaskan waters.

Native to Alaskan waters is a giant crab which, when fully grown, weighs 15 pounds and stretches four feet from tip to tip.

"There is a steadily-growing demand for fat Canadian cattle in the English market, despite the embargo and the fact that it costs approximately $100 to ship a steer from the States to England and pay for its slaughter with ten days of landing."

"This statement was made by John Burns, general manager of the P. Burns Company, Ltd. In speaking of the English market, Mr. Burns said that for the past twelve years there had been no demand. Now, in spite of the very high freight rates, both from here to the seaboard and across the Atlantic, despite the fact that Canadian cattle arriving in England must be for "immediate slaughter; this market was developing and the demand exists."

"There is actually a shortage of fat cattle in Western Canada at the present time," Mr. Burns said. "It is evident that the market is developing and the demand exists."

Within the last few years the marketing conditions for cattle in the West have been undergoing a great change. This has been brought about by the transition from the period when the cattle were sold in the West to the present conditions of today. The country is now more thickly settled and individuals have more money. Not many years ago the big ranch was the predominating figure. Vast acreage, most of it held under lease, gave him a domain on which the cattle could be run by the thousands. Under such conditions it was natural that the cattle were sold in large lots at one time in the year. As a result of the great bulk of stock were sold to the packers in the months of September, October and November. It is evident even to the layman that this produced an unhealthy market condition, October and November were loaded up with stock at one period of the year, and received little during the other nine months. A glutted market and fall prices were almost always the result.

But with the settling of the country the little ranches have gradually disappeared. More intensive cultivation has been followed by more numerous small herds of cattle and bring a better balanced price to the market. Today the cry of many of the big men in Western Canada farming for ever smaller units. Gradually the market is being fed as the demand comes. Mr. Burns hopes that the time is coming when there will be a steady marketing of cattle over the greater part of the year. This will mean less fluctuation in prices and better prices for the farmer, packer and consumer.

The man who held on to breeding herds, said Mr. Burns, would himself fit in the best position. Previously to the war bacon imported from the English market ranked high in the list of luxuries in Canada, American. At the present time there is about an equal demand for fish and Canadian bacon. The Canadian bacon market is the American product has lost much of its reputation owing to carelessness in preparation. There is a constant demand from English buyers for Western Canadian bacon and it cannot be filled today.

Although few shipments are being made to England at present and are being disposed of at some profit, conditions are far from favorable. In approximate figures it costs $30 to ship an animal from Lake to the seaboard, $30 for freight, and $100 for the slaughter and the charges on arrival. Rates like these make it unwise to ship anything but the best of the stock. Stockmen say that the animals generally pick up at least some of the weight lost in the train journey and during the sea passage.

Britain Stops Bonuses to Agriculturists

A further industrial dispute may be added to the existing controversies in the coal, cotton and engineering trades in England, through the decision of the government, as announced, by the ministry of agriculture, to cease control of agriculture.

The decision is due to the financial crisis through which the country is passing. It has already been seen by the government that the protracted depression in trade, which has been intensified by the continued suspension of work in the coal fields, involving the government in heavy expenditures for the maintenance of the unemployed and the heavy deficit of the railways, which still are under government control, will completely upset all budget estimates. Hence it seems that the government is hastening to do away with all control, which involves financial liability. The cessation of control of agriculture, which would require the assent of parliament, would mean the abolition of guaranteed prices for wheat and oats, and of the powers presently used by the county councils to enforce proper cultivation.

It would also result in doing away with the agricultural wages board, which fixed minimum wages, varying from forty-six to fifty shillings weekly, for agricultural labourers. This would mean that farmers would be permitted to resume their freedom from legal restrictions in the payment of wages, and it is considered certain that they would reduce the scale of wages now in force, which probably would lead to a cessation of four wages affecting more than 400,000 persons.

The witnesses are generally very much against gambling on the grain exchange, and are unable to see Judge Hyndman any way to stop it without incurring legitimate trading.

He made it clear to them that the commission was desirous of getting information regarding a practical way of curbing fluctuations, but pointed out that even if you could not get legislation in Canada you could not do so in the other countries of the world to which the buyer would go, and the market here would still be affected.

Questioning of the witnesses for the past two days has been almost wholly in the hands of the chairman of the commission who seems to have a genuine desire to get out real evidence if available, and to discourage the placing of a shoe on the record of opinion by those who confess they are not experts. Opinion with regard to the value of a wheat pool is apparently in a rather chaotic state. There has not been much complaint regarding dockage or weights.

Several roads demanded reduction of a flat 30 per cent out for all employees, while others merely declared that every basis for last year's increase had disappeared and that it was now time to restore the wage schedule of April 10, 1920, prior to the application of the $200,000,000 wage award.

Not Much Expert Evidence Coming Out

Very much the same class of testimony came out before the grain commission at Lethbridge this week as elsewhere, a good deal of dissatisfaction with the present system but a lack of practical suggestion as to how it can be remedied. It is somewhat surprising to note everywhere how little knowledge the farmers have of the grain act which was devised for their protection. The majority of those who come before the commission apparently know nothing whatever of the contents of the act and many of those who have brought instances of grievance before the commission have made no practical effort to have them remedied.

One witness who had a case against the United Grain Growers, of which he was a member, had brought no documents of any kind with him and after his case had been gone into exhaustively by the commission, said he had never taken it up with the head office of that body lest he might be called a liar.

The witnesses are generally very much against gambling on the grain exchange, and are unable to see Judge Hyndman any way to stop it without incurring legitimate trading.

He made it clear to them that the commission was desirous of getting information regarding a practical way of curbing fluctuations, but pointed out that even if you could not get legislation in Canada you could not do so in the other countries of the world to which the buyer would go, and the market here would still be affected.

Discourtesy Is No Sign of Independence

"One thing I notice is that the idea is beginning to prevail in this land that lack of courtesy is a sign of independence," said R. B. Bennett, K.C., in the course of an address at the annual banquet of the Canadian Storage and Transferment's association in the Hotel Palliser. "Let us remember how we were brought up, and that discourtesy is not a sign of independence. Once you have clearly shown that it is not, you will have done much to avert that which has happened in Europe. Do what you can, show that spirit of courtesy to those who serve you, as you are courteous to those you serve." Mr. Bennett spoke of the modern socialist children, their profanity and vulgarity on the streets, and how many of their elders were showing an example of the "imagined independence" which was purely and simply a total lack of courtesy.
